

Scottish National Team: First Training Session at Stirling University

September 13th marked the beginning of a new era for Scottish Taekwondo with the first full National Team training session of at our new Stirling University base. At this session each player, having demonstrated continuous development and skill, was officially welcomed into the National Team.

Set in the shadow of Stirling Castle and the Wallace monument, the new training facility befits the professional efforts of both athletes and coaches alike.

With support pending from SportScotland, the athletes identified will have an excellent opportunity to develop with professional support services in partnership with their existing club structure. It's a great time to be involved in Taekwondo in Scotland and we hope to see many more athletes pushing for a place with successful performances at national and international competitions.
